Better News For Fine Gael

by: Richard Colwell

Some reprieve today for Fine Gael after a tough few weeks fielding questions about the party's position in the polls and briefings around concerns in its leadership.

Firstly, the party regains ground lost last month, bringing it back to a similar level of support at 22% that it secured at the last election. This is within margin for error on our last poll, but suggests support remains in the low 20s in the long-term trend rather than a protracted decline in support.

Secondly, there is relatively strong backing from voters for Leo Varadkar to remain as leader of the party going into the next election, particularly amongst Fine Gael voters. We asked all voters, when putting aside your own party preference, who they think should lead Fine Gael into the next general election. Clearly this is difficult for some of those who have no interest in Fine Gael to have an opinion. Despite this however, Leo Varadkar gets the highest level of support among all voters at 23%, which rise to a third (33%) among those who actually express a preference.

The next best candidate is Simon Harris, but he is some way behind with only 14% of Fine Gael voters supporting him, while Pascal Donohue comes in third, with 12% support.

Support for Varadkar as Leader of Fine Gael is similar across age groups.....MORE

Quality Control

We would like to remind you that our reputation as a leading market research company is based on the accuracy and validity of the data we provide to our clients.

To ensure members do not complete surveys hurriedly or provide incorrect information, a series of check questions are included at intervals. These inbuilt quality control questions appear on every survey and are administered to everyone equally. Answers provided by members who failed the Quality Control check are not included in the survey results.

We appreciate that this can be frustrating when a genuine mistake is made, however, we are unable to make exceptions to the mechanisms and allow members to go back and change their answers, so please take extra care to avoid being screened out of surveys.
