Housing issues are not clear-cut for the public

by: Richard Colwell

The major issue of the week has been the government's decision to end the eviction ban and to allow landlords to evict tenants again from April this year. This decision has been met by uproar from the opposition parties and has also received negative media coverage in the context of the housing crisis still gripping the nation.

The complexities of the housing crisis, and the levers that impact on it, mean, however, that this is perhaps not such a clear-cut issue for the public as media coverage would suggest.

While we know that housing is a major political issue and will be extremely important in how people vote at the next election, it doesn't appear that ending the eviction ban has had a major impact on current levels of support for government parties.

Today's poll sees the two larger government parties retain the same overall level of support as before the decision. Fine Gael even makes a small gain to see support at 22%, while Fianna Fáil see a small decline from what a high point for the party in our series over the past number of months was. The Green Party's support falls back by 1%, but overall, this means the government parties secure 40% support vs 41% last month.....HERE

Best Wishes

FAQ's

Logged out of a Survey

Please remember that you can now log back into a survey if you are unable to complete it in one sitting, or if you are logged out due to a technical fault or a server error. We hope this will improve your experience of RED C Live. If you are logged out, please wait for at least 15-20 minutes before you attempt to log back in.

Quality Control

We would like to remind you that our reputation as a leading market research company is based on the accuracy and validity of the data we provide to our clients.

To ensure members do not complete surveys hurriedly or provide incorrect information, a series of check questions are included at intervals. These inbuilt quality control questions appear on every survey and are administered to everyone equally. Answers provided by members who failed the Quality Control check are not included in the survey results.

We appreciate that this can be frustrating when a genuine mistake is made, however, we are unable to make exceptions to the mechanisms and allow members to go back and change their answers, so please take extra care to avoid being screened out of surveys.

Reporting issues with surveys

If you encounter an error or a problem when taking part in a survey, such as the screen freezing or otherwise, please forward us the original survey invite, along with a screen shot of the error, where applicable, to info@redclive.ie
