CASE STUDY

Confidence and Supply a Likely Feature of General Election 2020

By: Richard Colwell

The last RED C poll of 2019 provides us with a good picture of the political landscape in which the General Election will be fought in 2020. The fact that everyone knows an election has to take place in the first half of next year, means that most parties are already on election footing, and it is likely that the rhetoric will ramp up as we move into 2020 and TD's can see the campaign approaching.

The current first preference support for the two largest parties in the state is eerily similar to that seen before the last General Election in 2016; and point towards a similar outcome, with neither party potentially able to form a government without the support of the other.

Currently Fine Gael have 30% of the first preference vote. This means they start in a good position of being the largest supported party in the state. At the start of 2020 there will also be a focus on the parties handling of Brexit, as the situation comes to a head once again in the UK, and this is the party's strongest card among the public. However, the highest polling support figures Fine Gael have seen since the last General Election has been at 34%, so even with gains during the first few months of the year, the party is unlikely to secure support above this level.

It should also be remembered that Fine Gael were in the driving seat prior to the last General Election in 2016, polling at a similar level of 30-32% support...MORE

FAQ's

Logged out of a Survey

Please remember that you can now log back into a survey if you are unable to complete it in one sitting, or if you are logged out due to a technical fault or a server error. We hope this will improve your experience of RedClive. If you are logged out, please wait for at least 15-20 minutes before you attempt to log back in.

Quality Control

We would like to remind you that our reputation as a leading market research company is based on the accuracy and validity of the data we provide to our clients.

To ensure members do not complete surveys hurriedly or provide incorrect information, a series of check questions are included at intervals. These inbuilt quality control questions appear on every survey and are administered to everyone equally. Answers provided by members who failed the Quality Control check are not included in the survey results.

We appreciate that this can be frustrating when a genuine mistake is made, however, we are unable to make exceptions to the mechanisms and allow members to go back and change their answers, so please take extra care to avoid being screened out of surveys.

Reporting issues with surveys

If you encounter an error or a problem when taking part in a survey, such as the screen freezing or otherwise, please forward us the original survey invite, along with a screen shot of the error, where applicable, to info@redclive.ie
